How does life change when you realize you're 50? As I mentioned on the "Agency" show recently, I am 50 on December 18. Already I feel this is my midlife. So, since I have so many questions about life, I thought I would try to give a list of what I have learned about life as I get older. And I have a few observations. I think this will also help with the "What went wrong?" question too. First, I have learned that:

1. Time does not pass by. Time is your perception of it.
2. Everyone else around you is in the middle of their lives. You are here in the middle of your life. 3. Life is made up of moments. Moments are always there for you. Only you determine what is important to you in the moment. 4. Life is not fair. It is not what you deserve, it is what you choose. 5. One day is not different than another. It is an illusion to think that day is different. Each day is exactly the same and is what happens to you every day. 6. Don't care what the other person thinks of you. Don't care about other people and their problems. Focus on yourself. 7. There are no great ideas until you can explain them. 8. Every person you meet has their own experience. Your job is to listen to the person
