Q: Can't access custom list using REST API in SharePoint 2010 I'm trying to access a custom list through its API, but it seems I need to have access to the connection string which I don't have. When I check the access is checked and the permissions are checked, "contribute" and "view items" but I get this error: {"error": "Server failed to authenticate the request. Make sure the value of Authorization header is formed correctly including the Signature. OData error code is '-1, Server failed to

What's New in the JIT Scheduler?

description Whatever application you want to run automatically needs to be registered in the application manager. Once added, it's easily set to launch at a fixed time interval, specify the system time, and determine whether it should be launched when the computer comes back online. The application manager also supports tasks relating to documents, which is done by clicking on the document's icon on the right-hand side of the screen. Once a document has been registered, a number of options are available to define the task, such as the type, triggering the task in fixed or variable intervals, specifying the application, and even how often it should be opened. Messages are easily launched in JIT Scheduler by adding an association with the program which creates the message. Everything else is same as the document option, except for the fact that the message icon is placed on the left-hand side instead. Automatically shutting down the computer is achieved in a very convenient way, as an icon is available on the top toolbar, which can be used on a context menu or by hitting the Power button on the keyboard. There is an abundance of activities which can be performed on a computer, even though it doesn't mean spending pass-time on it or playing video games. Regardless of the case, it might come in handy to have some simple tasks, such as running programs, activated automatically at predefined time intervals, and JIT Scheduler can help you in this regard. Various task types to choose from As far as the visual design goes, the application reserves most of the window space to show all created tasks in a table layout, with column headers for name, date, time, interval, command, status, and last run. The upper toolbar holds general functions, which can also be accessed from the context menu. There are a couple of task types you can create, namely based on computer user, or general system tasks. You easily switch from a dedicated drop-down menu, while the creation window remains the same. This means that you're able to have tasks automatically launched on other users, given they're configured on the administrator account. Set fixed or variable trigger time Creating a new task brings up a window which takes you through several steps. A name needs to be written down for easy identification, as well as the type, which can be application, document, message, or shutting down the computer. The action field changes depending on the task type you
